SIR ALFRED MILNER.

Mr. Chamberlain has announced Sir Alfred Milner as the first civil governor appointed by Great Britain for the Transvaal. Sir Alfred is a very popular man with all classes of Englishmen and comes nearer than any other statesman to having the respect and confidence of all political factions. He is an Oxford man and was knighted in 1895.

TRIVIAL CASES IN POLICE COURT

Twelve Convictions Out of Twenty-Four Stated Charges.

Twenty-four cases of minor importance came up for trial in the District Court yesterday, of which nine were nolle prossed, and five discharged.

Alan was fined $10 and costs for assault and battery on Mele, a Hawaiian female. The assault was committed during a clash between the Lung Tus and the See Yups, in which a friend of Mele's was mixed up. Mele interfered and tried to persuade her friend to cease fighting, with the result that she was knocked down and kicked by defendant, who was also engaged in the brawl.

Jack Edwards was fined $5 and costs for beating Ah Ngo. Defendant is a waiter, and complainant a dishwasher at the Moana Hotel.

The pair had trouble about a basin, and the Chinaman called Edwards an uncomplimentary name, whereupon Edwards chided him with his hands and feet.

Judge Wilcox told defendant that when he was called names in future, he would do well to consider the source from which the insult proceeded, instead of fighting everybody who applied an unsavory epithet to him. Otherwise, said his honor, life was likely to be one continual round of scrapping.

The charges of gambling against Henry Akau, Alapai, Kaina, Ane, Annie, Mrs. Ioela and Lemuel, were nolle prossed, on account of their having testified against Ioela on Wednesday, as a result of which, that individual was fined $50 and costs.

John Anton Tavash was reprimanded and discharged for assault and battery on his wife, Mary Tavash. Mrs. Tavash wasn't half so mad at her husband in court as she was when she caused the warrant for his arrest to be issued, and expressed her willingness to forgive and forget.

Ah Hing and Ah Kee, alleged to have committed assault and battery on W. Cogul, were discharged on account of insufficiency of evidence.

The case against J. C. Quinn, charged with having committed assault and battery on R. B. Knowlton, was nolle prossed, complainant failing to put in an appearance at the proper time.

L. Verreira, an expressman, was reprimanded and discharged for having driven a horse in a dray faster than a walk, and on another charge of having neglected to display his driver's badge.

Other cases disposed of were: Edward, Mulligan, R. Dushaisky, drunkenness, bail forfeited; Thomas Tine, John Namoolau, Bagley, drunkenness, $2 and costs; T. Y. Loong, obstructing sidewalk, nolle prossed; Mateuo, vagrancy, April 12th; Delaney, profanity, $2 and costs.

BEARS AND BOBCATS IN MAINE.

They Approach Civilization Rather Too Familiarly.

"Zekel" is fairly driving the Oxford county farmers distracted. "Zekel" is the amiable black bear that dwells in great abundance up that way. He isn't dangerous. "Zekel" was never known even to make faces at any one that walked upright on two legs like himself. The fact is "Zekel" is too well fed to be cross; and "Zekel" is well-fed condition makes the farmers mad. "Zekel" has attained his prime condition on their fat sheep.

There are more black bears in Oxford county to the square mile than in any other area in Maine. The residents of the county call themselves "Bears," so noted is the country for its bruins. Oxford is a land of hills and craggy little mountains, rising abruptly from the river meadows. Almost every farm has its rocky steep—a hill humping from the level of some back pasture. "Zekel" lives up in his den on the mountain and finds it easy to drop down on the flock and scuttle back to shelter again. Two years ago the bear bounty in Maine was declared off. Now the farmers of Oxford are piling in petitions by the hundreds asking that the bounty be restored.

They say that the bears are fairly eating them up. The "critters" have stolen fat sheep, they have broken into the cellars through the bulkheads and have extracted the best vegetables. They have even bursted the butter crocks and some mornings when the man of the house has gone downstairs to see what has been happening the language that he has used has been of the sort that isn't tolerated ordinarily in puritanical Oxford county.

At the last session of the Legislature the bounty on wildcats was also lifted. It is now in order for some of the people down in Washington county to follow along behind the farmers of Oxford and request of the state that a price be placed back on the head of the "house-cats."

Mrs. Harriet Bagley of Whitneyville, will, however, take care of herself on the bobcat question even without the state law. She was sitting in her kitchen the other evening waiting for the men folks to come home. All at once she heard a queer sound at the window. There was no curtain there. She looked, and against the glass was pressed the furry face of a bob-cat.

A bobcat has a curiously blank countenance. His ears stick up straight in an inquisitive fashion, but his eyes are simply saucerlike, without expression. The cat sat perfectly quiet and stared at Mrs. Bagley without winking. Those great round eyes glittered in the frozen night. They glared and they stared at the woman, who sat and stared back at him. At first she had the uncomfortable notion that he would pretty soon make a spring and come through the glass, but he seemed content to sit and look at her.

She recovered her self-possession a little and commenced to make motions to drive him away. His eyes only grew a bit larger, if that were possible, and still he looked at her without winking. In a little while Mrs. Bagley grew mightily offended at this close and bold scrutiny. She had been reading the fashion page in her weekly paper, and now to save her life she couldn't get interested in the latest style of skirts. It was too much for any woman to bear.

So she went along to the wood box and secured a big chunk of birch. The cat never took his eyes off her. His gaze followed her when she boldly went to the kitchen door, raised the latch and threw the door open. When the lamp light streamed out into the night down jumped the bobcat and started to straddle off. But Mrs. Bagley aimed her birch stick in such a deadly fashion that she hit him on the head. She didn't go out to see what had happened to him, but when the men folks drove up an hour later there was a dead bobcat in the yard.

ARMY DUELLING SCANDAL IN GERMANY.

A dinner was given by the officers of the garrison of Morchensee, a town near Metz. In honor of the Kaiser's birthday. After dinner an army surgeon, Dr. Ruger, was giving a display of his strength, and took an officer of the Seventeenth Infantry Regiment, Capt. Adams, by the wrists and forced him off his chair onto the ground. It was all meant in good part, but Capt. Adams resented it and struck Dr. Ruger, and then retired to his room. Thither he was shortly afterward followed by two other captains, who had come to arrange the affair in accordance with the military code of honor. Capt. Adams had gone to bed, but a third visitor was awaiting him. This was Lieut. Ruger, the brother of the insulted army surgeon.

Although the two Captains expostulated with him Lieut. Ruger insisted on remaining, and when the door of the room opened and Capt. Adams was about to enter he drew a pistol and shot him dead on the spot. Lieut. Ruger then handed over his sword to the two Captains and explained that he had sacrificed himself for his brother, who was the father of a family, and who would probably have been killed if he had fought a duel with Capt. Adams, that officer having been a notoriously good shot. On surrendering himself to the authorities of the garrison Lieut. Ruger was conveyed to Metz, where he awaits his trial by court-martial. Such a tragedy can hardly fail to bring home to many the inequal y, and therefore the essential injustice, of duelling as a means of settling disputes.—London Times.

Wasn't a Doctor of Medicine.

Dr. William Pole, the authority on whist, who died the other day, was not a doctor of medicine, but a civil engineer, who received his degree from Oxford. He wrote a treatise on the method by which the eye discriminates color, although he was himself color blind. This dissertation caused him to be elected a fellow of the Royal Society.

HUMBUG IN THE HOUSE

excavators finish work in one block, the trench is taken possession of by the track-layers, and the excavators move on to the next block, followed by the track-layers as soon as they have completed their work.

"In this method of procedure, while it is true that more than one block is under process of construction at the same time, it is to the interest of the public that his should be done, as the work is completed much more rapidly than it would be if it were confined to one block only, and consequently the people are not so long deprived of the use of the street.

"From this explanation I hope the public will understand that we are trying to accommodate it as much as we can, and that we have considered the question carefully and have adopted the method that will least inconvenience the people, in our judgment."

MRS. MARY GREGOVICH

Of Phillipsburg, Montana, Tells How She Was Cured of Dandruff.

Mrs. Mary Gregovich, of Phillipsburg, Montana, under date of Nov. 26, 1899, writes: "I had typhoid fever this summer, consequently was losing my hair terribly, and my head in places was perfectly bald. Newbro's Herpicide had just come into use in Phillipsburg and the doctor strongly recommended it to me. After three or four applications my hair stopped falling out and is coming in again quite thick. I used to be troubled greatly with dandruff, of which I am now quite cured." Kill the dandruff germ with Herpicide.

A TESTIMONIAL FROM OLD ENGLAND.

"I consider Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the best in the world for bronchitis," says Mr. William Savory, of Warrington, England. "It has saved my wife's life, she having been a martyr to bronchitis for over six years, being most of the time confined to her bed. She is now quite well." It is a great pleasure to the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be able to publish testimonials of this character. They show that great good is being done, pain and suffering relieved, and valuable lives restored to health and happiness by this remedy. It is for sale by Benson, Smith & Co., Ltd.
